MOTORCYCLES TYPICALLY DON'T SPROUT FROM THE PACKED, GROOVED EARTH OF A FLAT TRACK COURSE.

They don't grow under the halogen glow of pole lamps in the dirty air of race night. But this one did.

The Indian FTR™ 1200 exists because the championship-winning FTR750 set the flat track world on fire, breathing life back into that most American of motorsports. "It's our heritage; it's in our blood to compete," says Steve Menneto, CEO of Indian Motorcycle. "I told my team, 'We're going racing, and I want a bike that gives us a shot at winning.'"

The FTR750 overwhelmed the American Flat Track™ paddock and took checkered flags every weekend, piloted by a new-age "Wrecking Crew" following in the tracks of the original Crew from the '50s. Soon fans started asking when the company would build an FTR for the street. Menneto says, "Honestly, that's where we were in our thinking before we even won a race: We've got to bring this thing to the road. It's a bitchin'-looking bike, and it's what we've got to do."

MEET THE FTR™ 1200

“Every step of the way, we looked at the race bike for inspiration,” says senior product manager Ben Lindaman, who shepherded the FTR™ 1200 from paper to production. Lindaman and his team started with a rigid, steel-trellis frame with aluminum engine mounts, mid-frame, and steering-head mounts. The bike weighs less than 500 pounds dry, giving it the best power-to-weight ratio of any Indian motorcycle. Lindaman wanted as much of that weight to sit as low as possible, which is why the majority of the 3.4-gallon fuel cell resides below the seat. The lightweight tank offers greater capacity than a standard, top-mount steel tank, with a range of about 125 miles.

The engine is a 1,203cc, 60-degree, liquid-cooled and fuel-injected V-twin, developed with knowledge gleaned from the FTR750 race bike. It looks similar to the Scout’s engine, but there’s almost nothing shared between the two engines. “The FTR’s is substantially new,” Lindaman says. “It has a 12.5:1 compression ratio, and we focused on making the engine lighter. It’s a fundamentally different philosophy versus what we had been doing.” With more than 120 horsepower and 85 lb-ft of torque, the engine pulls furiously all the way to its 8,250-rpm redline.

Wide ProTaper® handlebars and aluminum foot pegs are borrowed from dirt rippers, but the massive 4.3-inch TFT touch-screen display on the FTR™ 1200 S is the kind of premium hardware often seen only on high-dollar street machines. “If we were going to put a display on there, it had to be one that worked well in all riding conditions,” Lindaman says. “It had to be easy to read in direct sunlight, in shade, or at night. It’s awesome.”

“It’s a bike that just goes with you,” Menneto says. “It responds to your inputs, and it’s willing to do anything you want to do.”

The FTR™ 1200 rides on lightweight, 10-spoke cast aluminum wheels — 19 inches by 3 inches in the front, 18 inches by 4.25 inches in the rear — shod with exclusive Dunlop® DT3R tires, essentially the same rubber that carried Indian to victory on the track but with a tighter, shallower tread and added silica for longevity. Massive, semi-floating disc brakes with four-piston Brembo® calipers slow things down up front, while a two-piston caliper contends with the rear. The swingarm is made of tube steel for greater rigidity and pivots through the engine crankcase. All FTR models use 43mm inverted forks with 150mm of travel, but the S offers greater adjustability hidden within its gold tubes; preload, compression, and rebound can all be set to the rider’s preferences. Lindaman says, “We wanted to keep the bike small, and one of the ways we did that was with a right-hand monoshock rear suspension.” The side-mounted monotube shock comes with preload and rebound adjustment on the base model, while the 1200 S benefits from an aluminum piggyback reservoir and full adjustability, including compression.

The standard FTR™ 1200 has antilock brakes, while the FTR™ 1200 S has cornering-optimized ABS as well as traction control, stability control, wheelie control, and three riding modes: Sport, Standard, and Rain. Each mode offers subtle adjustments to power, throttle sensitivity, torque delivery, and slip angle.

The overall result is a smart machine that’s upright and handsome, aggressive but approachable, and very capable — built for this world’s coiling pavement and its battered dirt roads to nowhere. It was made to endure everything you can throw at it, with more than 1.5 million development miles and 2,000 hours of powertrain endurance tests. “It’s a bike that just goes with you,” Menneto says. “It responds to your inputs, and it’s willing to do anything you want to do.”

FOUR COLLECTIONS. UNLIMITED POSSIBILITY.

"DIFFERENT SONGS, DEPENDING ON YOUR MOOD" IS HOW ONE RIDER DESCRIBED THE FTR™ 1200'S four collections: Tracker, Rally, Sport, and Tour. The FTR™ 1200 is a bike built to be yours, with a sprawling catalog of more than 40 parts and accessories. The four collections curate pieces for your favorite type of riding, but you can also pick and choose and customize to your heart's content.

TRACKER

COLLECTION

THE FTR™ 1200 TRACKER COLLECTION looks like it rolled right off a TT course.
Super Hooligan racer Jordan Graham gets dirty to see if the bike remembers its flat track roots.

WHEN JORDAN GRAHAM ISN'T PAINTING MOTORCYCLES or helmets for the biggest names in the industry, he's racing his highly modified, Roland Sands Design® Indian Scout in the Super Hooligan series. Over the past three years, Graham has fallen in love with his Scout, racing it in hill climbs and enduros when there isn't a flat track to rip up. Who better to unleash on the FTR™ 1200 S fitted with the Tracker Collection?

The collection is the closest you'll come to a street-legal FTR750 race bike. Unique bodywork, clear turn signals, a shallow seat, and number plates on the side set the Tracker collection apart. "Looking at it and thinking that it's an actual production motorcycle blows my mind," Graham says. He spent hours on the FTR™ 1200 S Tracker, riding around a dusty oil field outside of Long Beach, California. Graham says there's no comparison between his race bike and this production FTR. "My Scout Sixty is fast, but hopping on the FTR™ 1200? It absolutely eats that Scout up. When I was drifting the thing, I was barely touching the throttle. It's wild how much horsepower it has." High praise from a guy who has weathered one flat track brawl after another.

RALLY

🏁 COLLECTION 🏁

THE FTR™ 1200 RALLY COLLECTION is for finding lonely camp sites on forgotten forest roads.
Red Bull rider and Super Hooligan hero Tyler Bereman sends it on silty two-track.

A THIRD-GENERATION MOTORCYCLE RACER WHO WATCHED his dad go elbow-to-elbow with flat track legends like Ricky Graham, Chris Carr, and Jay Springsteen, Tyler Bereman now travels the world as a Red Bull-sponsored rider. Bereman got to know the Rally Collection on the roads and in the forests around California's Big Bear Lake, riding nearly 90 miles of dirt over the course of a day. "It feels exactly how a scrambler should feel," he says.

The Rally Collection swaps the standard 10-spoke, cast-aluminum wheels for a sturdy aluminum wire wheel set. A unique seat and mudguards set the Rally Collection apart, as does a high-mount Akrapovič exhaust. Radiator covers, a low windscreen, and a high license plate holder round out the changes, and the configuration allows the FTR™ 1200 to take full advantage of the bike's 150mm of suspension travel. Bereman kept the bike in Rain mode through most of his ride, relying on the smoother throttle, reduced power and slip angle to keep him pointed the right direction. "I don't know how many hours we rode, but just getting to know that bike was one of the most fun days of trail riding I've had," he says. "I kind of put it through its paces — and maybe put it through some testing that I shouldn't have — but it absolutely exceeded my expectations."

SPORT

❑❑❑❑ COLLECTION ❑❑❑❑

THE FTR™ 1200 SPORT COLLECTION is a no-nonsense assembly of speed parts, underscoring the bike's performance. Pikes Peak champion Carlin Dunne buries the throttle.

CARLIN DUNNE HAS MADE A CAREER OF BEING THE QUICKEST rider in the room, with wins in Baja and at the untamable Pikes Peak International Hill Climb, where he stands as the first person to break the 10-minute mark on a motorcycle. He's been on a bike as long as he can remember. Longer, probably. "Now that life's more complicated as an adult, I find that motorcycling is an outlet in a whole different way," Dunne says. "I can get on my bike, twist the throttle, and in that moment the sheer exhilaration wipes out any other concerns I might have."

The Sport collection exists to provide that rarest of escapes. It is not made for two-up riding or bashing through broken forest roads. It is the FTR™ 1200 distilled down to its athletic core, designed for one rider, fitted with a performance exhaust, a unique front fender, and a seat cowl. Dunne is a sharp critic informed by years of road racing experience, but the FTR stood up to everything he threw at it. "The front end was surprisingly planted, and the bike handles lighter than it actually is." The FTR's V-twin howled into corners before Dunne squeezed on the Brembo® brakes and let his inside knee kiss the pavement, suddenly disappearing in a flurry of dust and speed. "The bike is fun," Dunne says. "And that, ultimately, is what I think the Indian engineers were trying to accomplish."

LOW MOUNT SLIP-ON EXHAUST BY AKRAPOVIČ

TOUR

❏ COLLECTION ❏

THE FTR™ 1200 TOUR COLLECTION outfits the bike with luggage and wind protection.
Atwyld's Jaime Dempsey packs her bags and gets lost in the California desert.

JAIME DEMPSEY KNOWS JUST HOW FAR A MOTORCYCLE can take you. As the co-founder of Atwyld, a women's motorcycle apparel company, and the host of History Asia's Ride N' Seek, she's hunted out the forgotten corners of our world from behind a set of handlebars. "In the motorcycling community, all these people with the same passion get along and support each other," she says. "You get this sense of belonging, of family."

Dempsey's riding family now stretches from her home in Redondo Beach, California, to Thailand, Borneo, and Malaysia. It's no wonder she gravitated toward the FTR™ 1200's Tour collection, designed to take you wherever you want to go with a tank bag, messenger bag, and a windscreen. "I really love the luggage," Dempsey says. "Very cool styling, and it has these hooks that attach to the rack, so it's easy on and off." The water-resistant roll-top bags provide space for your essentials, and the windscreen keeps you comfortable on those long days when the road pulls you far from home. The Tour collection turns the FTR™ 1200 into a highway weapon, made for consuming miles.
